Dear Mr. Brown:

When he returned from leave, Mr. Yalden was informed of your telephone conversations with John Dwyer and me and in particular, of your request that our Commission do something to help correct the misconceptions about the condition known as environmental sensitivity.

Mr. Yalden was very interested in what we related to him and was also sympathetic to your concerns. This is why he wrote to the Minister, Mr. Epp and brought to his attention your testimony before the Standing Committee on National Health and Welfare. As you will see from the letter which is attached, he went on to encourage the Minister and his department to "increase public awareness of the legitimate concerns" you have expressed.

I hope you will think this was a helpful initiative on our part.

Yours sincerely,

Denise Ommanney
